Introduction

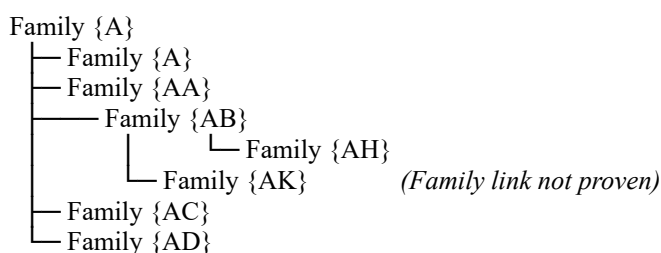

The starting point for this family history is that described as Pedigree “C” in Chapter 20 of Audley Pedigrees by A. L. Reade. That document should be read in conjunction with this family history narrative, and Chapter 20 can be found in the ‘Published Information’ section of the Audley Family History Website, under the heading ‘Audley Pedigrees’.

Whilst most of their known family history is spent in Liverpool, Lancashire, this branch of the Audley Family moved from Shotwick in Cheshire to Liverpool in Lancashire around 1800. Four Brothers left Shotwick in Cheshire around 1800 and moved to Liverpool in Lancashire. These four Brothers are the founding members of Audley Families ‘AA’, ‘AB’, ‘AC’ & ‘AD’. The Family ‘A’ narrative contains the information about the family while they were living in Cheshire.

It should be noted that while the family was living in both Shotwick & Neston, Cheshire, their surname was recorded as “Allday”.

¹ In the 1841 Census of England, A. L. Reade has an Alice Audley, age not given, described 'Lady Unmarried' at Morris Court, Jamaica Street, Liverpool. Having looked at a Census image, the Alice Audley that is aged 50 and occupation is two words the first word is either Lady or Self. Do not believe the second word is unmarried. The combined words could possibly be 'Lady Annuit'. As the ages in the 1841 Census tend to be rounded to 5 years. Served in the 4th King's Own Royal Lancaster Regiment, seeing service in Malta, Hong Kong, Singapore and India. Afterwards in a canteen at Aldershot. Stationed in Newcastle upon Tyne in 1907. He was discharged on the 21st February 1908 after 25years service on a Pension. She died on the 12th August 1915, her age being stated as 39, and was Buried at Holy Trinity Cathedral, Rangoon, Burma. Frederick and Blanche had issue. (Comment: It is speculated that the Wife of {AC32} Blanche Audley nee Rossiter returned to England arriving on 6th May 1910 at London aboard the Bibby Line "SS Warwickshire" but on the passenger list she is recorded as 'Mrs Audley' and appears to be travelling alone. This Mrs Audley appears to have boarded the "SS Warwickshire" at Rangoon. There is an inconsistency in the information about {AC32} in that the information above says that he retired to reside in South India (Calcutta) in the Nilgiri Hills. Calcutta is in North India not South India. If one lives in Calcutta in North India it is appears sensible to travel back to England via Rangoon, Burma however if one is living in Southern India, the Nilgiri Hills, Malabar, or Madras, it would seem more sensible to pick up a boat from Colombo in Ceylon that had sailed from Rangoon in Burma (as the "SS Warwickshire" did) rather than travel to pick up the boat. If this person was the Wife of {AC32} then she arrived in England 3 months before her First Husband had Died in India. The Wife of {AC32} is linked to Rangoon, Burma, in that she married her Second Husband there.

He was Born 1874 and Died on the 28th August 1924. Army Service Records have their Marriage registered in 1906 at Darjeeling, West Bengal.

He was detained and sentenced to imprisonment with hard labour for 112 days for committing a 'Civil Offence' on 11th December 1907, and discharged from the British Army on the 9th April 1908 for misconduct. His service record for this period survives. A Charles Audley born in 1889 admitted himself to the Portsmouth, Hampshire Workhouse from 13th to the 19th April 1909. (Based on the year of Birth this person in the Portsmouth Workhouse is likely to be {AC34}). During World War I, He served in the British Army, Royal Irish Rifles, as a Private, Service No #11186, and also 10th London Regiment, Private, Service No #424881 ((Hackney)(Originally Paddington Rifles). (Whilst an element of uncertainty exists because of others similarly named, it is predicted that this World War I service record relates to this particular 'Charles Audley'). He was of 6, Lindale Gardens South, Blackpool C B, Lancashire, a Watchman in 1939 (but see comment below). He Died Q1 in 1976, at Blackpool. He Married to ALICE BUTTERWORTH Q2 in 1915, at Old Fylde Register Office or Registrar Attended at Blackpool, where their Marriage was registered. (Comment: In the General Registry Office Marriage Record for Alice Butterworth, her Husband's surname was recorded as either Audley or Johnston. It is not known why this event is recorded in this way but was significant enough to have been recorded at the time of their Marriage.

Comment: It should be noted that in her birth registration at Newbridge, Naas, County, Kildare, the field for the child's name is left blank, and the sex of the child is recorded as female. It is concluded that this is the Birth registration of {AC35} from the names of the parents recorded on the birth registration, the sex of the child and the age of {AC35} in the 1901 Census of England. It should also be noted that her birth registration is one of 10 birth registrations on a page. Of those 10 birth registrations 7 took place at the Curragh camp and all 10 Fathers appear from their 'Rank' appear to have been serving in the Army. Of the 10 births registered on the page the child's name is only recorded for three of the children.

- I. {AC49} JOHN AUDLEY, of whom presently.
- II {AC50} GEORGE AUDLEY, to whose financial support we owe this History of the Audley family. Born on the 22nd December 1864, at 125 Park Street, Toxteth Park, Liverpool, and Baptised on the 25th January 1866, at St. John the Baptist Church, Toxteth Park. Of 25 The Elms Toxteth Park, in 1871; of 27 Higher Lane Walton On Hill in 1881 a Commercial Clerk; of Moss Lane, Broadfield, Orrell & Ford, a Chemical Broker, in 1891; of 29 Trafalgar Road , Birkdale, an Export Beer Bottler in 1901. Of 29, Trafalgar Road, Birkdale, Lancashire, a Home & Export Beer Bottler, in 1911. Of 1 Lulworth Road, Birkdale, Lancashire, a Retired Whiskey Distiller, in 1921. Though his Grandfather had worked himself up from the position of a working Shipwright and without capital to a Partnership in a leading firm of Shipbuilders, and his Father had also engaged in the same business as a Principal, the family fortunes had rather declined again. The firm of Cato Miller and Co., in which John Audley was a Partner from about 1848 to 1867, were too much ahead of their time: they embarked on the construction of Iron Ships and paid the common penalty of pioneers by losing all their fortune, though they were able to pay their creditors in full.⁵ After this calamity, which necessitated his leaving the house to which he had moved in Cressington Park, he joined with his son William in forming a new firm, taking in Charles Mead, the firm becoming Audley, Son and Mead. But Mead soon let the firm down, and went to Australia. Father and son then, about 1870, took into partnership George H. Willmer, a fellow apprentice of the Father's, under the style of Audley, Son and Willmer. Things, however, did not prosper: ohn and William Audley seem to have dropped out about 1877; leaving Willmer to carry on alone in the same yard in Jordan Street. William Audley started a small coal business, but never restored the family to prosperity, so that his children had to depend mainly upon their own exertions for any advancement in life
- George Audley was educated first at Dr. Nathaniel Bushell's private academy at 50 Devonshire Road, Liverpool, which he left in 1876, for Kingston School, Yeovil. After three years there, he was apprenticed to Messrs. John Swire and Sons, London Merchants and Ship Owners, at their branch office, 32 The Temple, Dale Street, Liverpool, having failed, as he would recall with a certain amount of satisfaction, to pass the test for the Royal Insurance Company's office, through some stupid mistake in spelling. When the firm closed their Liverpool office, he transferred to Messrs. J.P. O'Brien and Co., in the same building, Mr O'Brien was a cousin of the Swires, and his firm traded as general merchants, but specialised in the export of beer and stout. George Audley's whole business life was spent with the firm, which in 1902 removed their office to 5 Pall Mall, a few streets away, some five years later changing to 10 Pall Mall, where they still carry on. The bottling stores were then moved to their present situation in Tariff Street, Vauxhall Road. (This Company information is no longer valid, although was in 1930's)
- Without special ability, in the scholastic sense, he entertained as a youth very restricted ambitions as to his financial future. He was always a very modest and retiring man, who never pushed himself forward in any way. But in addition to much shrewdness he possessed boundless industry and in his early business days, when all sorts of difficulties confronted the firm, he thought nothing of working twelve or fourteen hours a day, alternating with night journeys to Glasgow and Dublin. His energy, combined with his tact, brought the firm through various troubles, and eventually he rose to be Managing Director. This position ensured him a comfortable security, but it was through a business deal for which he claimed little credit himself that he acquired the fortune which quite altered his circumstances. In March 1918 his firm entered into a contract for the purchase of the old-established business of Wright and Greig, Ltd., Distillers, of Glasgow, the consideration being in the neighbourhood of one-and-a half-million pounds. This deal was negotiated by George Audley with Mr. Duncan McLeod, now the Laird of Skeabost, in Skye, who was then Managing Director of Wright and Greig. Mr McLeod joined the board of O'Brien's, as Director, to deal with the newly acquired whisky interests. About February 1920 O'Brien's made another move, entering into negotiations for the purchase of the business, distilleries and immense whisky stocks of Bulloch, Lade and Co, Ltd, of Glasgow, the figure involved being close on two million pounds. Very soon after the completion of this huge deal, O'Brien's decided to dispose of all their newly acquired distilleries and whisky stocks, and for this purpose it was necessary to put the company into voluntary liquidation, which became effective on 31st March 1920. The parent business, of home and export bottling, was disposed of to a company that still carries on under the old name, at the same addresses.

It was the business genius of Mr. McLeod, which lay behind these big deals, but considerable credit must belong to George Audley in connexion with them. He was not a man, probably, who would on his own initiative have ventured schemes of such magnitude, yet he saw his opportunity and had the courage and enterprise to accept it and profit by it. At any rate, he came out with a substantial fortune of £180,000, which enabled him to retire in the prime of life, to devote himself to furthering those various philanthropic and artistic causes that he had so very much at heart. In fact, henceforth, his was a dedicated life, though he would hardly have thought himself of claiming it as such. The collection of pictures became his great hobby, when he had the means to indulge it, and in 1924 he presented fourteen valuable paintings to the Walker Art Gallery in Liverpool. The first gift by which he became well known to the public was the result of his interest in art. In 1925 Sir Frederick Bowring, then Mayor of Liverpool, who had already given £10,000 to the fund for extending the Walker Art Gallery, undertook to match any further donation, and George Audley responded to the challenge with a promise of £10,000, which was thus automatically doubled.

Summary of Benefactions to the City of Liverpool in a 10 year period were:

To Walker Art Gallery.	Extension Fund.	£ 10,000

In this same year he added forty-three pictures to his previous gift, mostly by Victorian artists. Over a period of some fifteen years he continued to present a large number of pictures to the same Gallery, from the collection he had formed, mostly representative of the English school, the best known, perhaps, being Sargent's "Vespers," which he gave in 1928. In the completed Gallery one of its fine rooms was named the "Audley Gallery." He also gave to the Corporation a number of pieces of statuary, including John Gibson's "Garland Dance," which stood in the entrance hall of Allerton House, the life-size figures of Adam and Eve, by Arthur G. Walker, A.R.A., and Spence's statue of Flora Macdonald, stood in the Sefton Park, Palm House. A handsome gold clock for the Liverpool Town Hall entrance was another gift. But the gift by which he became best known to the public of Liverpool, and its young people particularly, was that of a replica of Sir George Frampton's statue of Peter Pan in Kensington Gardens, costing nearly £2,000, the local site chosen being in Sefton Park. Before his death he had arranged for another replica at a much higher cost, to be placed in Sefton Park, of the famous statue of Eros in London, with a fountain. There were some complaints from artists that he did not commission fresh work instead of getting replicas of existing pieces, but he was following his own taste in the matter and associating it with that of the public whose pleasure was his principal care. To Stanley Park, Liverpool, he gave a children's garden with a floral clock and other attractive features. His interesting collection of "Toby" and other jugs were given to the Liverpool Museum.

To the beautiful Sefton Parish Church, at Sefton, a few miles from Liverpool, where his elder Brother had been confirmed, he presented a valuable copy of Botticelli's "Madonna," in a specially designed oak frame, which hangs on the south wall; and also a copy by Albani of Raphael's Tuscany "Madonna", which hangs in the priest's vestry. This was in 1927, when he also placed a stained-glass window in the north wall of the church, with other members of his family, to the memory of their father and mother. In 1926 he was unanimously co-opted a member of the Arts Sub-committee of the Corporation, in recognition of his services to art. In 1929 he was appointed to the Commission of the Peace for Liverpool. He was Chairman of the Stewart-Jones Evening Homes.

For some years before his death he had been troubled with his heart, and been compelled to "go slow." Of a fairly stout build, and inclined almost to pride himself on his physical inactivity, he rather felt that justice would have been better served by such a complaint attacking one of those people who put their hearts to severer tests. Death came to him suddenly, as he was dressing, on the 25th February 1932, in his 68th year. He was Buried at Duke Street Cemetery, Southport, on 29th February, after a service at Christ Church there, and where he had been a Sides Man.

His will, dated the 14th April 1930, with a codicil of the 23rd January 1931, was proved in April 1932. The gross value was only £55,911.6.5, and the net value £53,873.3.9. Apart from legacies, etc., to relatives and others, his principal bequest was one of £10,000 to the building fund of the Liverpool Cathedral, which was a project after his own heart, even had he not been a staunch supporter of the Church of England. He left the choice of not more than fifty of his pictures to the Corporation of Liverpool, for the Walker Art Gallery. Any residue of his estate was to go to Dr. Barnardo's Homes.

George Audley, though a genuine lover of pictures and taking a real joy in those of his own choice, was not in touch with any modern art movements, which he was quite unable to appreciate. Their manifestations, in architecture as well as in pictorial art; convinced him that he was spending the last years of his life in the "age of ugliness " The school of Victorian artists he favoured "slumped" so badly in public estimation that when the residue of his collection, consisting of 98 items, was sold at Christie's on 12th May 1932 they realised only the paltry sum of £1314. 6. 6. He never attempted any painting himself, though his elder Brother, before business absorbed all his energies, practised the art with enthusiasm, while their Sister Edith had a taste for painting in oils.

He had very definite ideas regarding the responsibilities of those blessed with surplus means, and when he retired it was with the deliberate intention of giving back most of his money to the city in which he had been fortunate enough to acquire it-and he never overlooked the fortunate element in his career. Being a Bachelor, he was free to act upon his principles. At Birkdale Lodge, Southport, where he removed from a smaller house in the neighbourhood after his retirement, he had a roomy and comfortable home, terribly crowded, on his own admission, with pictures and other works of art, but he was a man of simple tastes who spent comparatively little on himself. His two unmarried Sister's, who lived with him in great affection, he had provided for, and his system was gradually to denude himself of his capital, in chunks, with the result that he was looked upon as a man of much larger means than he really was, by those who thought he was giving out of his income. His will evidences how far he had travelled along the road of financial renunciation.

Though (or perhaps because) a very modest man, he took a great but simple pride in what he had been able to do for his native city, and in any recognition that, quite unsought, came his way. His frequent visits to the studios of London artists, both on his own behalf and that of the Liverpool Arts Committee, were a personal delight to him, as bringing him into friendly contact with men whose attainments he envied and admired. He was a man of quiet, very deliberate, and homely speech, whose kindly expression, and eyes twinkling from behind his glasses, were often more eloquent than his words. Slow to make up his mind, he was not easily moved from his path when he had chosen it. No one could visit him in his home without feeling attracted by his complete unpretentiousness, his quiet, pawky humour, his deep-seated spirit of kindness, his sincerity, his unselfishness, and his real desire to make the world a better and happier place, especially for children. He was prompted by pure benevolence of heart, and not by any of those envenomed principles that sometimes make philanthropists terrible even in their generosity. At the same time, he could now and again slyly discharge little shafts of sarcasm that found a billet with the sensitive.

A very feeling tribute to George Audley as a man was contributed to The Liverpool Daily Post by Mr Percy Corkhill, who as Lord Mayor's secretary came much into contact with him: --

To know George Audley, was to love him. He was not easy to know--his nature was of the retiring kind; how he hated to fuss. But his heart was of gold. Most people will remember him as the benefactor of art. His gifts were abundant, and as a donor his name will long be remembered in Liverpool as well as in the Metropolis.

Mr. Audley, had a passion for Liverpool. His mind was always on the city he loved so well. He was jealous for its prestige, and he carried his dislike of other preferences to the extreme. Nothing is too good for Liverpool, he used to say, and he deplored the passing of the days when the heads of great firms were the giants of business here before the trek to the South. But most of us will remember George Audley for his love of children. He was at his best when among them. Nothing was too good for them. The poorer they were the more they attracted him. His Peter Pan is more than a piece of poetic beauty in Sefton Park-the garden at Stanley Park is more than a floral clock and collection of whimsical statuary; they are monuments to the memory of a man whose soul was moved at the starving mind and vision of the average child--and of the determination to bring some joy, day by day, into the drab existence of some at least.

Mr. Audley's last visit to Liverpool was to see his friends, and to see the site for Eros in Sefton Park, and although he was obviously unwell he paid his last visit and, so it happened, his farewell to the Peter Pan dell, when he embraced little ones who had come for their afternoon visit to fondle the tiny figures in Frampton's masterpiece. George Audley has passed, but his memory is sweet and fragrant.

In an address before the funeral, The Reverend. L. J. Coursey, Vicar of Christ Church, Southport, where George Audley was for several years a sides man and a generous supporter of its social activities, emphasised the lovable simplicity of his character: -

I suppose we naturally think first of those public acts of munificence, which are familiar to all minds.

George Audley lived in Southport, but his heart was in Liverpool. He was a native of that city, his ancestors had lived in it, and Liverpool to him was the place above all others. And so he took joy in doing what he could for it. In a material age he was a patron of art, and thereby he rendered no small service to the public weal. In a world dazzled by the achievements of science he remembered the greater things that men pre inclined to forget--art and beauty. Generations to come will thank God for what he did. Perhaps the biggest thing about him was that he had preserved so wonderfully the heart of a child. He presented that exquisite replica of Peter Pan. He loved to see the children playing in the park he gave them. He loved the young because he, too, was young.

His city honoured him and he strove worthily to serve it in God's sight. We have lost a great and generous friend. I thank God for his childlikeness and that other outstanding quality he had of utter simplicity. He never spent his wealth on himself.

These tributes do not lay any too much stress on his love for Liverpool, which differed so markedly from the casual friendliness felt by most businessmen for their native city. In his inarticulate way he was a romanticist, and his imagination easily warmed towards whatever helped to revive memories of the past. One little thing he did in the service of local history: in 1931 he paid the cost of reprinting the 4th edition (1773) of Gore's Liverpool Directory.

The most widely placed and permanent memorial to George Audley will be this Family History. It was at the end of 1924 that he began to feel he would like to know more about his ancestors, and got into touch with me. Though there was a family connexion between us (my Father's Brother had married his Mother's Sister) and we both belonged to Liverpool, we had never met before. I agreed to undertake enquiries, and to make a small charge for my services, as the subject was not one of personal concern to me, and the work rather interfered with my own special researches. He knew his family history as far back as his Great Grandfather, William Audley, and it is a confession good for my soul that after eight years or so of enquiry, during which most of the centralised evidences for the whole country were ransacked for evidence concerning anyone bearing the name of Audley, as well as an immense number of parish registers and other local records, not to mention all the ordinarily accessible printed sources, I was unable even to tell him that Great-Grandfather's parentage! However, he soon became interested in the growing accumulation of Audley's, past and present, and fell in with my suggestion to print the results, despite his disappointment at being left without the means of connecting himself with any of the numerous lines of the family which I was able to show had flourished in many parts of the country down to the eighteenth century. I may record that he handed over to me during the seven years of our pleasant partnership in this: work a total sum of £920, which was increased by sales of Parts I. and II, to £934 odd. He left everything entirely in my hands, as to the researches undertaken; the printing of the two Parts, and my own charges I find that roughly my charges over the whole period amounted to £220, while the printing and distribution of the two Parts cost some £240. The cost of searches, including fees, postages, stationery, and incidental charges of every kind, came to about £430 leaving a balance of £441 in hand towards the cost of printing--this Part III. The amount of work that has fallen upon me during all these years in the conduct of the searches, the sifting, sorting and arranging of the evidences, and the seeing of so much printed matter of the kind through the press, has been very heavy, but it has been a labour of love. Most of the searches in printed material have been made personally by me. Had George Audley lived he would have contributed further towards the completion of the work, but dying suddenly he was given no opportunity to make such provision as would have enabled me to carry it to a conclusion without being confronted by almost insuperable financial difficulties. It may be added that 300 copies each were printed of Parts I. and II., of which 247 were distributed free to Libraries, including all the leading ones in the British Isles (Public, University, Society, Club, etc.), and a comprehensive collection of similar ones throughout the Empire, the United States, and the principal countries of Europe. Rather more than a third of them have supported the continuation of the work by subscription.

For the memory of his parents George Audley had the greatest veneration, as well as for that of his Grandfather, John Audley the Shipbuilder, whose character and ability were an inspiration to him. He felt that such a grandfather, however humble his immediate origins may have been, carried the impress of a superior race (his portraits certainly suggest it), and he would have been delighted, though not from ordinarily snobbish motives, if his grandfather's descent could have been proved from some of those earlier Audley's whose careers suggested the possession of qualities and capacities that are generally considered a valuable inheritance. But the characters and achievements of some "Knights of old" would probably have ill compared with George Audley's unspectacular virtues and benefactions, which added new traditions, of a peculiarly human kind, to the history of the name he was so proud to bear.

1931 Census of England

The 1931 Census of England was taken 26th April 1931 but was destroyed during WWII

1939 Registers of England

The 1939 Registers were created in 1939 for the issue of registration documents and ration books shortly after the commencement of World War 2. As they were produced after the start of the war they do not include people who were member of; conscripted into and volunteered for the Armed Services. Additionally After World War 2 these registers were used as the registration of people into the newly formed National Health Service. These registers were 'updated' by the National Health Service until 1991 when the National Health Service Registration was computerised. The updates made under the National Health Service typically include; changes of surname by Marriage, corrections to Christian names (for example changing initials to full names) and recording the Deaths of individuals listed in the registers. No changes of address are recorded are the Births of new individuals are not recorded.

The records of individuals are either open or closed. Open records can be viewed by the public and Closed records cannot be viewed by the public. Records are open if one of the following conditions applies:

- * The record is open if the person was born more than 100 years ago. This is the 100 year rule and means that progressively more records will be opened each year until they all become open in 2040.
- * The record is open if the person is deceased and the person's Death is recorded in the registers. In theory this means that the record for anyone listed in the registers and Died before 1991 should be open. However not all deaths before 1991 were recorded in the registers, and people who were in the Armed Forces in 1939 are not listed in the registers.

Records that are not open are closed. However members of the public can make requests to the National Archive at Kew to open closed records. To do this they must be able to supply a copy of a Death Certificate and the National Archives must be able to relate this Death Certificate to a particular individual in the 1939 Registers. For example the Death Certificate has the address where the individual died and the 1939 Registers have the address where the individual was living in 1939 so not all requests may be successful
