ALDITHLEY SIVE AUDLEY, OF HELEIGH.—(25 EDW. I.)
(25 EDW I =20 November 1296 to 20 November 1297)

This barony of ancient date, and of great fame in its early lords, being an existing title, of which an elaborate account may be found in the various editions of Collins's peerage, and the peerages of the day, a lengthened account of it is here unnecessary to be entered into, and as such it may suffice to say, that {ZA10} Nicholas de Aldithley, or Audley, was first summoned to parliament the 25 Edw. I. But Sir Harris Nicolas, in his Peerage Synopsis says, it is doubtful if that writ can be considered as a regular summons to parliament: yet, whatever the opinion of that learned gentleman may be, it appears that a parliament was holden in that year, in which the great charter, and charter of the forests was confirmed ¹ He died in 1299, and was succeeded by his son,

{ZA11} Thomas, second lord Audley, who died shortly after in 1307, under age, and without issue, (according to Dugdale) leaving Eve his wife surviving (who was daughter and eventually heir of John lord Clavering) and {ZA12} Nicholas, his brother and heir, which {ZA12} Nicholas, third lord Audley, had summons to parliament from the 6 to the 12 Edw. II., and died the year following, (1319) ² leaving Joane his wife surviving, (who was widow of Henry Lacy, earl of Lincoln, and sister and co-heir of William Martin, baron of Kameys) and {ZA13} James his son and heir, ³ which Comment the website authors count {ZA12} as being the first Lord Audley of Heighley. ' Baronies in Fee' is consistent with the ' Parentage of James de Audley KG' as they both refer to {ZA10} as being the 1st Baron of Heighley.

{ZA13} James, fourth lord Audley, was then not fully three years of age, who afterwards became one of the most eminent noblemen of his day, and was particularly famous for his martial exploits at the ever memorable battle of Poitiers, having had summons to parliament from the 4 Edw. III. to the 10 of Ric. II. He died the same year, being then one of the knights of the illustrious order of the Garter. He married 1st Joan, daughter of Roger Mortimer, earl of March, by whom he had {ZA16} Nicholas his son and heir, and two daughters, viz. {ZA15} Margaret and {ZA14} Joan. To his second wife he married Isabel, one of the daughters and co-heirs of William Malbank, by whom he had a ²Dugdale in his Baronage, p. 748. says he died the 10 Edw. III., but his name appears in his Lists of Summons, in the above said 12 Edw. - v II.

³b On a brass plate fixed on an altar tomb in the nave of Audley church, co. Staff., is the following inscription:

daughter also named {ZA20} Margaret, who married Fulk Fitz-Warine.

Comment : 4 Edw III is 25 January 1330 to 24 January 1331

Comment: 10 Ric II is 22 June 1386 to 21 June 1387

Comment: {ZA13} was not the James Audley who was at the Battle of Poitiers (Poitiers) nor was he a knight of the order of the garter. This is an early misconception of many histories of the Barons Audley

Comment: The second wife of {ZA13} was not Isabel Malbank but Isabel le Strange. Interestingly Josiah Wedgewood in 'The Parentage of James de Audley KG' states 'He {ZA13} married (2) Isabel whom G.E.C calls for no discoverable reason the daughter of Wm Malbank' In the revised version of the Complete Peerage published after 'The parentage of James de Audley KG' the second wife of {ZA13} is given as Isabel Le Strange.

{ZA16} Nicholas, fifth lord Audley, survived his father only a short time. He married Elizabeth, daughter of Alice de Beaumont, countess of Boghan, (Buchan), and having been summoned to parliament from the 11 to the 14 Ric. II., died shortly after (1392) without issue, leaving {ZA36} John Tuchet, grandson of {ZA14} Joan his eldest sister, and {ZA15} Margaret the wife of Sir Roger Hilary his other sister, his co-heirs of the whole blood. The said comment 6 Edw III is 25 January 1332 to 24th January 1333.

DUGDALE, in his Lists of Summons, mentions a John de Audele to have had summons to parliament the 6 Edw. III.; and on looking into the writ, this name is therein recited, as well as that of James de Audele; but who this John was, Dugdale, in his historical account of the family, has not made the least mention ;--yet the name of this John de Audele is twice repeated in the writs of summons of the 6 Edw. III.; the first to a parliament at Westminster, the second to a parliament at York.

Comment: I have no idea who this John de Audele is!

AUDLEY, AND EARL OF GLOUCESTER, (11 EDW. II).

{ZA23} HUGH DE AUDLEY, supposed by Dugdale to be a younger brother to {ZA10} Nicholas, the second of his name, Baron Audley (of Heleigh) was summoned to parliament the 14 Edw. II., as {ZA23} Hugh de Audley, Senr, but his son {ZA24} Hugh had summons in his life time, the 11 Edw. II., as {ZA24} Hugh de Audley, Junr., and had further summons from the 20 Edw. II. to the 10 Edw. III. Having married Margaret, one of the daughters and co -heirs of Gilbert de Clare, earl of Gloucester (relict of Piers de Gavestone), he was created earl of Gloucester in 1337, and by that title afterwards summoned to parliament till his death in 1347, when not having any male issue, Margaret his only daughter became his heir. ⁴ She married Ralph Lord Stafford, and the barony of Audley under the writ of the 11 Edw. II., as also that of the 14 Edw. II. to {ZA23} Hugh de Audley, Senr., merged in the Stafford family, and became forfeited with all the Stafford honours on the attainder of Edward Duke of Buckingham, temp. Hen. VIII.
